Keep Cadbury Independent

Cadbury is one of the world's best loved confectionery makers. It is also not for sale.

Yet, a hostile bid from one company, Kraft, has led to speculation that other companies will also bid.

Cadbury employs 6,200 workers here in the UK and Ireland, and 40,000 other workers around the world. They are now worried for their futures.

Kraft will borrow heavily to pay for Cadbury but debt on such a scale will destabilise a great business and thousands of jobs are sure to go. In the past 10 years, Kraft has sacked 60,000 workers to pay for other companies it has eaten up.

Don't let this happen to Cadbury and its workers!

Cadbury makes world-beating confectionery and it is independent. Because of this, Cadbury is successful, stable and its products are loved the world over.

Unite wants to keep it that way. If you love chocolate and you love Cadbury, you'll want to keep it that way too.
