Negotiations update – Wednesday 1st July

Where are you BA?

Talks adjourn overnight, but BA fail to turn up in the morning!

When talks adjourned at 6pm last night the unions left to consider proposals and reconvene at 10am today. The company failed to turn up!

We are angry and bemused by their actions given the 'supposed' importance of these negotiations and the issues we are all working to resolve.

Despite our best efforts over three weeks we have yet to reach agreement with the company on proposals that protect your interests as well as those of the customer and company.

We have responded to company proposals and tabled measures of our own that deliver huge savings to the company. These proposals are manageable, deliverable and realistic.

If the company are serious about finding a mutually acceptable solution then they need to step back from their vision of 'wonderland' and join us in the real world at the earliest opportunity.

We will continue to be available to discuss these over the coming days and weeks.

We will be available to meet at anytime.

We are very clear that we will not accept imposition or the unilateral changing of any of your terms and conditions, protections or working practices.

BA is at its strongest when we all stand together as we did following 9/11 and the SARS scare. Why do BA not want to work together now?

STOP PRESS ... STOP PRESS ... STOP PRESS ...

BA are requesting the support of ACAS in future negotiations. We have had no discussion on this with the company but will consider seriously any request from them that sees them returning to the table!
