NOT FOR SALE

All 54 Remploy factories, employers of over 2,800 disabled workers, are at risk of closure – victims of the government's catastrophic spending cuts.

Remploy provides real choice, real jobs for disabled workers – don't let the government destroy it.

Don't Destroy Remploy

The government wants to sell-off Remploy's 54 factories to profit-making private companies. And those that it can't sell will be closed.

The jobs of over 2,800 disabled workers will be lost if the government has its way.

Unite and the GMB say 'Remploy's NOT FOR SALE!'

Since 1946 Remploy factories have supported thousands of disabled people back into work, from ex-service personnel to people born with complex disabilities. During the last round of site closures in 2008, the majority of Remploy workers who lost their jobs are still on welfare benefits three years later.

Join Unite and the GMB in the fight to save Remploy.

Respond to the government's consultation document, by saying that Remploy factories must be given public contracts to ensure they operate at 100 per cent, stay open and continue to give disabled workers the choice of where and how they are employed. The consultation document can be accessed online at www.dwp.gov.uk/sayce-consultation. The consultation ends on 17 October 2011.
