“Untouchability’ is not just social discrimination. It is a blot on humanity.”

Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, December 2006

“Caste is India’s hidden apartheid”

National Campaign for Dalit Human Rights, India

Caste defines a person’s ambitions and eating habits... which political party a person supports and who they marry.

Randeep Ramesh, The Guardian 2005

Unite the Union and the Dalit Solidarity Network – UK work together to campaign against the atrocities, humiliation and poverty that over 300 million Dalits or ‘untouchables’ suffer due to a caste system which is more than 3000 years old.

Caste Discrimination is one of the biggest human rights abuses in the world today. The DSN’s UK arm was formed in 1998 to campaign against caste discrimination. It strives to raise awareness of the plight of the people of South Asia (Dalits - ‘broken people’) who are outside the hierarchical caste system, and consequently outcastes in society. The campaign works at a national and international level and acts as a channel for those oppressed by the caste system to be heard.

Unite the Union is one of the key supporters of the work of DSN UK

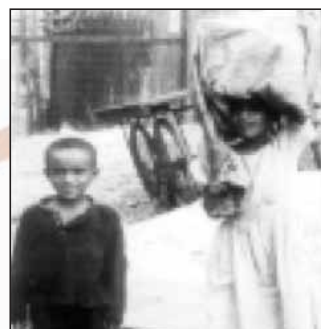

What YOU can do to make a difference:

- Strengthen solidarity by joining Dalit Solidarity Network UK
- Urge your employer to sign up to the Ambedkar principles of employment
- Raise awareness among the public, including the young, of the harsh and insidious nature of caste
- Support DSN campaigns, both nationally and internationally
- Be a voice against caste discrimination worldwide

An estimated 800,000 Dalits are still involved in ‘manual scavenging’ or the cleaning of dry toilets. The majority of Dalits are still restricted to their traditional caste-based jobs. This vision to encompass people in all countries who are discriminated against on the basis of their caste or their work and descent.

The human development indicators of Dalits are some of the lowest in the world - on par with or even worse than those of Sub-Saharan Africa

Dalit women and children are some of the most exploited, oppressed and humiliated people in the world.

Caste-based atrocities of assault, rape, murder and arson are committed against Dalits on a regular basis while the state, police and courts turn a blind eye.
