ESHER PLACE

Esher Place opened as Britain's first Trade Union College in the spring of 1953. The charm of this beautiful house provided the perfect environment for educating and training advocates of the British trade union movement.

Today, Amicus the Union continues to invest in providing first class facilities for its members whether attending education and training courses, regional and national industrial conferences or simply a relaxing weekend break.

Set within eight acres of Surrey parkland overlooking west London, this fine French styled Victorian house offers 11 superb conference rooms and 54 well-appointed bedrooms. Together with professional yet unobtrusive service, Esher Place guarantees a successful conference.

ACCOMMODATION

The house boasts 54 well-appointed and comfortable bedrooms, with styles ranging from the modern and functional to the original principal rooms that feature fine mouldings and elaborate marble fireplaces. Many enjoy fine views across the extensive grounds and beyond.

Standard bedroom facilities include digital TV, tea and coffee making facilities, writing desk with data points and en-suite facilities with bath or shower.
